STEVEN CUSHNER: 1700 L Street On View Through December 31, 2014

Washington DC—HEMPHILL is pleased to announce the project, Steven Cushner at 1700L, ongoing through December 31, 2014.

Steven Cushner expressed his interest in “changing things up”, working outside of his studio, and tackling a canvas larger than his studio could accommodate. So we began a search for a large temporary studio space. In early November Cushner moved into 1700 L Street NW. He is now at home in the space and has begun work on three large paintings simultaneously. The raw commercial space, formerly a florist shop, has windows on two sides allowing passersby to view the progress of his work from both 17th and L Streets.

Creating an effective artwork at a large size is an ambition artists have pursued throughout history. In more than a few cases, the masters of the past established their place in history and our memories through conquering large scale works. We are excited to see what Cushner accomplishes at 1700 L Street.

HEMPHILL invites you to drop by to take a look at the paintings in progress and share your images on:
